Minneapolis, MN---July 9, 2015--- Whether it is bringing big shots down to earth, managing social media risk, global anti-corruption programs, privacy compliance in the digital age, hearing the whistleblower, or conducting third party due diligence in China, the 2015 Society of Corporate Compliance and Ethics (SCCE) Compliance & Ethics Institute will address it. This year's Compliance & Ethics Institute, to be held October 4-7, 2015, ARIA in Las Vegas, has amassed a broad agenda of today's troubling compliance and ethics concerns and an impressive and international expert faculty to clearly define and confront the issues.

"The compliance and ethics profession, and the challenges it faces are growing in terms of scope and complexity," said Adam Turteltaub, Vice President of Membership Development for the SCCE. "The Institute helps the community get a better handle on the issues that are keeping them up at night, and causing great pain to the business world."

Over the course of four days, 2015 Compliance & Ethics Institute attendees will hear from speakers from the National Security Agency, U.S. Department of Commerce, NBC Universal, Saudi Aramco, GE, Lockheed Martin, U.S. Department of Justice, The Hartford, 7-Eleven, TIAA-CREF, US Steel, Molson Coors Brewing Company, Dell, State Farm, Northrop Grumman, The Nature Conservancy, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and more. The Compliance & Ethics Institute has gone beyond the globe to bring conference attendees general session speaker Dr. Garrett Reisman, who has spent over 100 days in space on a Space Shuttle mission and aboard the International Space Station.

"Few businesses face the degree of risks that space flight does daily. There's a lot to learn from Dr. Reisman about how to manage risks in any field," said Turteltaub.
