

Crewmember, International Space Station Dr. Garrett Reisman, “Generational Insights” Author Cam Marston, and U.S. Department of Commerce General Counsel Kelly R. Welsh are among the 2015 Compliance & Ethics Institute headliners

Four new sessions added to the Compliance & Ethics Institute agenda

October 4-7, 2015, ARIA in Las Vegas

Minneapolis, Minn.--- August 19, 2015 — “Generational Insights” author Cam Marston and International Space Station Crewmember Dr. Garrett Reisman, U.S. Department of Commerce General Counsel Kelly R. Welsh, compliance and ethics leaders Marjorie W. Doyle, Odell Guyton, Debbie Troklus, and Art Weiss are among the 14th Annual Compliance & Ethics Institute general session speakers, the Society of Corporate Compliance & Ethics (SCCE) announced today.

“This year’s general session speakers and topics are designed to both provoke thought and provide insights,” said Adam Turteltaub, SCCE Vice President of Membership Development. “We’ll be hearing perspectives from thoughtful experts within business, the compliance community, and the government. But we’ll also be going way outside the box, as well as the atmosphere, into low earth orbit to better understand the challenges we face and how to manage them.”

Compliance & Ethics Institute general sessions

On Monday, October 5, 2015, Cam Marston will present “Four Generations in the Workplace and What It Means for Your Compliance Program.” Dr. Reisman will follow with his talk, “Wonders of Spaceflight and its Risks: Lesson from the Space Shuttle Program.”

On Tuesday, October 6, 2015, “The U.S. Department of Commerce and The Fight Against International Corruption” will be presented by the Department’s General Counsel Kelly R. Welsh. A panel discussion —“NextGen Compliance,” moderated by SCCE’s Chief Executive Officer Roy Snell will include panelist
